

Students come to Carthage for a rigorous liberal arts education in the Lutheran tradition. Established in 1847, the college offers more than 40 majors leading to bachelor's degrees, and graduate studies leading to a master of education degree. Carthage's 2,500 full-time undergraduate students come from more than half the United States as well as from many other countries, drawn by the opportunity to learn from internationally renowned professors on a picturesque lakeside campus. Undergraduate research, service learning, study abroad, and internships are available to all students, building exceptional value into a robust learning experience extending well beyond the classroom. Many Carthage students continue their education at the nation's elite graduate schools. Among those who pursue careers immediately following graduation, 95 percent report landing satisfying positions.
