

Jack Bartelt

Director of Disability Services
Marquette University

Jack Bartelt is the Director of Disability Services at Marquette University, a Jesuit 4-year higher education institution located adjacent to downtown Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Marquette's Office of Disability Services works with the nearly 1000 students who are registered with the office (as well as visitors), and advocates for changes that can be made to increase accessibility across campus. Jack has a passion for helping campus partners understand the role that all staff and faculty play in making college campuses more inviting to individuals by exploring the barriers to access that are obvious, as well as those that are less well known. Through conversation, education and advocacy, Jack believes that we can increase diversity on our campuses and can remove barriers to opportunity for historically underserved and disenfranchised populations.
